

Chris The Amazing Kid

It was an ordinary day at the Davis house. Chris had been playing the Xbox that he had won at a game show. He had played a lot of games and playing as the Baltimore Orioles. He had won all of the games he had played, and he was undefeated. He wanted to play one more game before he had to eat supper, he was going to play against the Detroit Tigers. They were playing in the World Series. The series was tied 3-3. That meant that it was the rival game. Nothing had happened in the first few innings. Then Mom hollered "Chris, it's time to eat supper. We're having your favorite, pizza." But Chris didn't want to. He wanted to finish his rival game against the Tigers. But then Mom got all mad at him, then he whispered to himself "I better get down there!" Then he paused the game, and then they had Dr. Pepper, and they had a good dinner all together. Chris went back up to his room and resumed the game. Nothing happened until the 9th inning. Suddenly, a person from the Orioles, hit a solo home run on a 3-2 count. It was the Tigers turn to bat. Miguel Cabrera hit another solo home run. They were all knotted up at 1 apiece. Then came the 10th inning.

Chris made a pitching change. He brought in the best reliever on the team. He gave up three walks. then Chris said madly "Dang it". He got out of the jam. He struck out three in a row. He had the bases loaded. That made him feel really good inside. Chris hollered so that his parents could hear him "I have the bases loaded Mom and Dad!" The excitement came to an end in about two second. Tigers hit another home run to make it 2-1. Chris thought steam was coming out of his ears. But Chris came back with a walk-off two-run home run to beat the Tigers, and the World Series was the Baltimore Orioles.

It was around 10:00, that meant that it was bed-time for Chris. He had a dream. Here is the dream that Chris had. He had a dream of one day becoming the most famous baseball player ever. And playing for, of course, the Baltimore Orioles. The Orioles would make the World Series, just because of Chris. It was the best dream Chris had ever had. Very next morning Chris had been whisper- talk for the morning, because Dad was sleeping. He told Mom about the dream that Chris had. Mom got a little suspicious. Mom whispered to herself "Why would my son be having a dream like that?" For a couple weeks Mom thought about the dream Chris had. She even talked with Dad. He had no reason for why our son would have a dream like they. When Dad got home from work and Mom got home from work as well, they talked about it. Then Mom came up with an suggestion.

"Maybe it's the game he his playing." said Mom embarrassing.

Dad interrupted Mom and said "You really think that a game like that, our son is playing would make him feel like that" said Dad madly. The room became silent. Chris was gone that night. He was out to eat with some of his friends from school. That meant that Mom and Dad had some alone time for once. Before you knew it, Chris was home. Looking all sad. He had a black eye.

Mom looked sad. She said "What's the matter honey?" Chris was too mad to talk. Chris said "I got in a fight with all my friends." "How come?" "Because" Chris hollered. Mom said

"Because, why?" "Because I don't want to tell you why!" Chris yelled loudly. Chris marched up to his room. Chris shut his door very loudly so that every one in the house could hear him. The very next morning Chris woke up to find his Dad watching

Sports Center, watching the highlights from Baseball, Football, and Basketball. Dad signal to come and sit by him. Chris decided to come and sit by him. Dad said to Chris in the ear "You know, someday you could be like that." "Your an amazing kid" said Dad. Chris thought for a moment, then said "I know" They lived happily ever after
